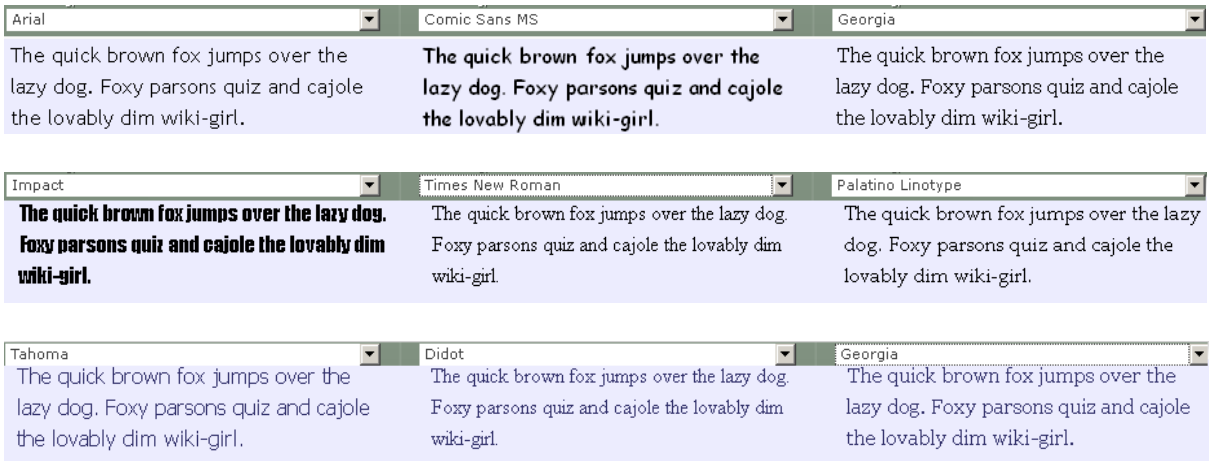
Font Development

Body Text Samples (tool credit: http://www.typetester.org/)



Client feedback: The body text in the website can be Arial, but it wouldn't look that great when implemented into titles are heading as it plain and not very attracting. Comic Sans MS is kinda a playful and funny font, and is often used for comic books, not always for the body text. Georgia is similar to Verdana in size and stature. It might attract people due to familiar font that people saw in books and documents everyday.

Impact is another bold headline choice that looks great in a few short words, but look bad in a sentence or longer. It's the font that my client don't like the most and wouldn't want it to be implemented. Times New Roman are some of the classic font out there, it would be fine to use. However, Times New Roman are often used in articles, newspapers and books and were consider an old font from my client. So to have the website look more professional, Times New Roman aren't included.

Palatino Linotype is ideal for use in extended text settings such as books, periodicals and catalogs. Not a font that my client look for in a biology website, but it still in consideration. Tahoma font are nearly exactly same as Arial. Didot is a font that often used in magazines, so to have the font as the body text it wouldn't be easy to read. My client choose Tahoma because of its clean, modern look, plus it's also a popular font among websites on the internet.

Sub Heading Samples

Georgia 17, bold	Georgia 17, regular
Heading The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog. The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog. The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog.	Heading The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog. The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog. The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog.

Tahoma 17, bold	Tahoma 17, regular
Heading The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog. The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog. The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog.	Heading The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog. The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog. The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog.

Impact 17, bold	Impact 17, regular
Heading The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog. The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog. The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog.	Heading The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog. The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog. The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog.

Client Feedback: My client prefer Tahoma 17, bold for the the sub heading as it's really clear and visible when look at it, while still keep the professional look, but not having each letter tightly fit together. The sub heading Tahoma will go with the Tahoma body text.

Main Heading Samples

Heading	Feedback
Sample Heading	My client find the Verdana bold will stand out too much for the rest of the page and can distracting users. It should be used for words that's needed to be emphasized.
Sample Heading	Radley font have the Times New Roman-like look for it and that what my client wants to avoid for website heading
Sample Heading	My client typically like this Verdana normal font because it's thin and easy to read, even if it zoomed out a bit further.
Sample Heading	The same feedback as for the Verdana bold.

Conclusion: For both the body text and sub heading, I will use Tahoma, and for the main heading, I will use Verdana normal.